5 – 6 October 2015 in Budapest

Monday, 14.00 – 14.10
Introduction to group sessions

By Hans Jørgen Vodsgaard, Interfolk

The content – main topics

The three group sessions will focus on the main issues and challenges to develop successful culture guide activities:

1. How to establish and facilitate culture guide activities
2. How to be a good culture guide volunteer
3. How to involve stakeholders

All three dimensions are interrelated and their relation and succession can differ in the specific pilot projects.

So as participants you don't need to start in sessions 1 and then have session 2 and the last session 3. Other starts can be as meaningful.

Common core in variety of pilot projects

VARIETY IN PRACTISE

The group sessions will as the Handbook properly indicate

- a multitude of approaches and different local pilot activities, which
- we see as a strength and not a weakness

SHARED VISION

The partnership shares the view that

- voluntary arts and culture can help people to a more fulfilling, enlightened and participatory life,
- voluntary arts and culture association have a societal responsibility to reach out to all social groups,
- and thereby promote “cultural sustainability” by transmitting the idea of “citizen help citizen” to practice in their field of activity.

The form – sessions with rotations

4

The advantage of using rotating group sessions:

- Small groups give better possibilities for all to join the dialogue
- The groups include participants from all countries – thereby share different experiences across borders
- Time for dialogue and compilation of new ideas for future activities

It is stand-alone sessions – not followed by plenary summaries
